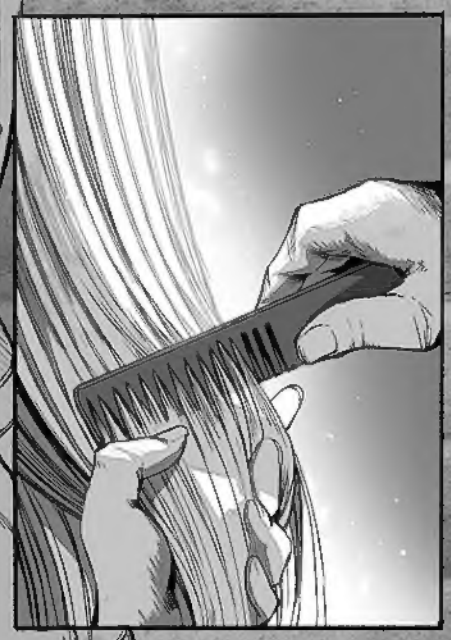
Inadvertenly, I forgot to buy her some clothes. So, with medicine and crops as gifts, I asked a friend from the village if I could have some of her old clothes for my new patient and she gladly gave them. I was grateful.

Herbal ointment was applied to all external wounds on her body, covering them with gallia leaves to stimulate skin recovery without leaving any mark behind. Thin cloths soaked in slime fluid were applied to protect the skin. The cloths are changed every three days or so.



When Reszurre woke up, I dressed her and combed her hair, finallysettling her into a girl like appear-ance. Perhaps due to the relief I felt seeing her reformed pres-ence, I suddenly felt two days' worth of drowsi-ness and fatigue overwhelming me.
